A NOTE FROM THE EDITORS

With this issue comes a number of changes in the staff and format of GEORGIA ARCHIVE. After two years, Linda Matthews has stepped down as editor. Former associate editor Ellen Garrison is now editor and Sheryl Vogt is associate editor. Robert Dinwiddie, who has been on the staff of the journal since its inception, has also retired. He is succeeded as managing editor by Holly Crenshaw of Emory University. Richard Kesner and Sheryl Vogt are making last appearances as department editors.

"Recent Accessions" appears for the final time in this issue. The Society of Georgia Archivists is working toward an arrangement with the Georgia Historical Society for cooperative compilation of an annual accessions list to be published in the Georgia Historical Quarterly.

"Short Subjects", under the direction of Glen McAninch of the Richard B. Russell Memorial Library, replaces "Archive Notes", previously edited by Le Hough. This new feature includes both shorter, signed articles and "News Reels", a summary of recent events in the archival community, new product information, important acquisitions and openings, and news of other regional archival organizations. GEORGIA ARCHIVE solicits contributions for this new feature, including reports of grant projects, of developments in processing procedures and techniques, and of staff training and development programs as well as technical information and reflections on the profession.

Beginning with the next issue, reviews of publications, whether print or other media, will be organized in a new format. Full-length reviews by various authors will continue to appear in the "Book Review" department under the direction of Darlene Roth of The History Group. Brief, unsigned reviews and notes will appear in a new department, "Recent Publications", to be edited by Martin Elzy of the Carter Presidential Materials Project. From time to time, there will also be extended review essays among the regular articles.

Over the last decade, GEORGIA ARCHIVE has adapted to meet the changing needs of the archival community. Many of those who have been instrumental in this adaptation have now retired from our staff. Their successors seek to continue along the paths they have marked and hope that the changes in the format of the journal will be another step in GEORGIA ARCHIVE's continuing efforts to serve the needs of our constituency.

CONTRIBUTORS

Ann Morgan Campbell is executive director of the Society of American Archivists, Chicago, Illinois.

Jane Meredith Pairo is head of the Public Services Section of the Archives and Records Division at the Virginia State Library. Her article is adapted from a presentation to the South Atlantic Archives Conference on 14 May 1981.

Alice Knierim is director of the Center for Local History Education, Georgia Department of Archives and History.

Anne Sims' and Susan Tannewitz Karnes' article is based on their work as graduate assistants at the Archives of Appalachia, East Tennessee State University. Ms. Sims is now assistant university archivist at Southern Illinois University and Ms. Karnes is administrative assistant for the Department of Computer Services at East Tennessee State University.

George D. Tselos is an archivist at the Archives of Labor and Urban Affairs, Wayne State University. This article is based on a paper he delivered at the meeting of the Society of American Archivists in Cincinnati, Ohio in October 1980.

Martha Green Hayes is director of curatorial services at Georgia Agrirama, the State Museum of Agriculture, Tifton, Georgia.

Nicholas C. Burckel is director of the Archives and Area Research Center and executive assistant to the chancellor at the University of Wisconsin-Parkside.
